As of the 2010 census, the population of Kaneohe was 6,615. Kaneohe is the third largest Hawaiian suburb of Honolulu, located north of downtown Honolulu. The area, formerly part of the former military base of Kaneohe Bay, is named after the Kaneohe Bay, part of which is now a nature preserve and artificial lake. The region is west of the Windward Highway, west of Waipahu on the Kamehameha Highway, and north of Kahuku. It is bounded to the west by Waianae, to the south by Waipahu, to the southeast by Kailua and Kailua-Kona, and to the north by Waikane. History Kaneohe was founded in 1890 by Christian missionaries from the Reformed Church in America. Named after Kaneohe Bay and the name of a kahuna (priest), who settled there, it began as a small settlement on the north end of the island. Over the next few decades, as a popular vacation destination, Kaneohe was built up with hotels, resorts, and summer homes of wealthy sugar plantation owners. The area still retains much of its Old West-style architecture. Education Kaneohe has two public schools: Kahuku Elementary and Kahuku
